Jeff Lemire continues to excel at writing his own stories (Marvel and DC characters, not so much...except for Old Man Logan). We are now five volumes into this space story that involves a conflict between robots and humanoids over nine different worlds. Mr. Lemire has done a decent job developing a number of different characters, both human and robot. Usually, the characters caught in the middle of this type of conflict are the most interesting. While those in-the-middle types are the major protagonists, the characters at command of the battling forces are actually more compelling. It is fairly unique, with a lack of focus on backgrounds. All around a solid comic.
